SETTING THE WORLD’S STANDARD FOR FAMILY ENTERTAINMENT

Committed to the Care and Conservation of the Endangered Asian Elephant

The state-of-the-art Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Center for Elephant Conservation® is not only devoted to the well-being of endangered Asian elephants, but also to their reproduction, retirement and research. On 200 acres of pristine land in Central Florida, the center is home to the largest sustainable population of Asian elephants and the most successful breeding program in the Western Hemisphere, with 26 births to date. Having so many pachyderms in one place gives scientists the unique ability to study the species and learn how to improve their health. And we share that knowledge with scientists around the world—including a recent conservation partnership with the island nation of Sri Lanka.
